How to Play

Once Upon a Story: Deal 7 – 11 cards to each person. Put the deck of leftover cards in the middle. Each person tells a story starting with “Once upon a story...” Use all the cards in your hand in whatever way you want to make the story unfold.

Match-Up: Deal 7 cards to each player. Place the remaining cards in the middle of the play area face-down. A player plays any one card from their hand on top of the top card of the discard pile, as long as it matches either the color border or the starting letter of the word on the card on top of the discard pile. Play continues around the table until one person runs out of cards.

Conversation Starter: Pick one card from the deck at random and notice your reactions to it. What does the card mean to you? Then read the card summary in the Guidebook to get more insights. If you are with a friend or friends, start a conversation using the question at the end of the summary.

Example: The Butterfly is the universal symbol of transformation when it changes from a slow-moving caterpillar into a fluttering, joyful butterfly. The Butterfly is finally free to explore its surroundings with light, graceful wings. When do you feel most free?
